6 Right of Ownership to Background Knowledge and to New Knowledge

- 6.1 Background Knowledge is proprietary to the Controlling Party. The Parties grant to each other a royalty-free, non-exclusive license for the duration of the Research Project to use the Background Knowledge. The license is limited to use for research necessary for the completion of the Research Project.
- 6.2 The right of ownership to New Knowledge shall belong to the Party whose employees intellectually have generated the relevant New Knowledge.
- 6.3 The Parties are however each entitled to make scientific use of New Knowledge within any scientific field, free of charge. This use shall however not involve behaviour which is detrimental to a possible patent, including publication, unless the procedure under clause 9 is adopted.

7 Joint New Knowledge

- 7.1 The right of ownership to Joint New Knowledge shall belong to the contributing Parties with undivided shares based on the employees' intellectual contributions.

- 7.2 Any disposal of the Joint New Knowledge, including commercial exploitation, transfer of one Party's undivided share or patenting, shall require agreement between the Parties.
- 7.3 Each Party is obligated to take the steps necessary to achieve Joint New Knowledge from the employees of the Party. This obligation is however limited to the New Knowledge comprised by and those powers which follow from the Act on inventions made at public research institutions ("Lov om opfindelser ved offentlige forskningsinstitutioner").

8 Confidentiality
